Report on Research Aptitude Development among the students

Date : 20th January 2022.

The "Research Aptitude Development Program for Students" was jointly organised by the Departments of Commerce and Economics. Students were orientated about the research culture in business through an online meeting.

Dr. Rajesh Bhoite gave a demonstration on how to design a questionnaire and collect data. A Google form has been created to collect data for the "Effectiveness of Pull promotion strategy and a study of customer behaviour with special reference to festival offers," and it has been shared with students to explain the research project.

Prof. Kirti Menghani, the IQAC coordinator, draws attention of the students about the importance of this activity and its future prospects. She answers all of the students' questions and concerns about the research project. It has been decided that students will use the provided link to collect data, and that once the data has been collected, the data will be analysed and a report published in the college magazine with the names of the participant students.

Around 80+ students attended the session and expressed their willingness to actively participate in the activity. Prof. Salman Sir begins the session by explaining the purpose of this research project. The vote of thanks presented by Dr. Karbhari Bhalchandra.
